Explore, Experience, Pursue Public Health

Apply by April 1!

Who can apply?
U.S. medical and veterinary students can apply for a 6- or 8-week school elective rotation with the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention to EXPLORE public health.

What do EEP students learn?
Students gain EXPERIENCE in public health and epidemiological concepts by supporting projects in a variety of areas and networking with public health professionals.

Why should students apply?
For students who want to PURSUE a public health career, EEP has a history of being a pathway program. Many EEP alumni have joined CDC’s Epidemic Intelligence Service (EIS) or became leaders in integrating public health and clinical practice.

How do students apply?
Apply online by April 1, 2019 at www.cdc.gov/epielective

What do EEP students do on their rotation?
Since 1975 students have worked in the following topic areas at projects focusing on the following topics:

Know a great candidate? Please share this announcement with your faculty and students.
Questions? E-mail us at Epielective@cdc.gov.